THEORIES IN DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT: SW3061/7061

Offered Spring 2018, Open to all disciplines

This course provides an overview of the key concepts and theories of human development as they relate to individuals with developmental disabilities. Through the lens of multiple models and theories of human development across the lifespan, students will develop a framework for understanding disability as a multi-level culture and identity. The impact of developmental disability at the personal, interpersonal, family, and societal levels will be considered.

3 credit hour course. Meets each Monday from 12:30PM-3:20PM.

This is the second in a 4 course sequence leading to a Certificate in Developmental Disabilities (for undergraduates). For information, contact Dr. Michael McCarthy, mccarml@ucmail.uc.edu, 513-556-3879.
